Sanchez Wins Run-Off

Winner Vows To Work on UNO's Image

Gordon Wishes Sanchez Well

by Stephen Croucher and Wendy Townley

Joey Sanchez is the new UNO Student President/Regent. Sanchez defeated Chris Gordon by obtaining 556 votes, to Gordon's 408 votes in the election held Wednesday and Thursday.

After learning the results Thursday night, Sanchez took a breath of relief and raised his hands in victory. The Criminology books on Sanchez's table at Applebee's would have to wait while he celebrated.

But the books won't be waiting long. "Right now, I plan to study for my Criminology exam I have tomorrow," Sanchez later said.

At the same time Sanchez was celebrating, Gordon wished Sanchez well. "I wish Joey the best of luck," he said.

Gordon said he was not necessarily looking forward to things returning to normal. "Normal is not what I wanted," he said. "I wanted to win... I regret that I didn't campaign harder."

Sanchez also said he felt he could have done more. "I met with more groups during the run-off than during the general election," he said. "But I could have met with more groups and organizations on campus, especially the smaller groups."

Sanchez said he did not think he would win a run-off election against Gordon. "I didn't want a run-off election. I wasn't sure if I'd win one over Chris," he said.

Now that he has been elected UNO's Student President/Regent, Sanchez said he is looking toward the future. "I want to work hard to improve the image of UNO," he said. "First, I'll start with working on increasing the image of UNO Student Government. To do this, I'll try to increase student involvement, and create tangible results for students from Student Government."

ILUNO Students Granted Vote in '78?

by Renee Novy

If Gary DiSilvestro, a UNO alumnus and former Gateway editor, is right, ILUNO students may have been allowed to vote in the student election of 1978.

DiSilvestro participated in last Friday's hearing on behalf of ILUNO students who are upset because they were turned away from the polls in the election of Oct. 15-16. The hearing before the Student Court was held to formally hear a complaint filed by former Student President/Regent candidate Tugba Kalafatoglu. Kalafatoglu contends that ILUNO students should be allowed to vote in student elections.

According to the Student Government Constitution, all "enrolled students" are members of the electorate at UNO. Kalafatoglu contends that ILUNO students fall into this category.

DiSilvestro agrees. He said he believes ILUNO students should be considered "enrolled students".

ILUNO students are enrolled in a non-academic program and, as a result, are not included on lists issued by the UNO Registrar's office. Those lists only

Director Takes Leave

"This 90 day leave is a time to step back, to think about what I want to do, what I'd like to do."

— Louis Cartier, Director of University Relations

by Renée Novy

Louis Cartier, the long-standing director of University Relations has taken leave from his duties effective Monday, Oct. 13.

Nancy Castilow, manager of Community Relations and Special Projects has been named Interim Director.

"[Cartier] is on 90 day leave with pay right now," Castilow said.

Cartier said in a telephone interview last Monday that this leave is something of a respite.

"This 90 day leave is a time to step back, to think about what I want to do, what I'd like to do," he said.

"My wife and I are enjoying this chance to get off the merry-go-round and reflect," Cartier said.

No official reason has been given for Cartier's leave of absence, and both Cartier and the offices of the Chancellor and University Relations have reserved the right to privacy on the matter.

"Whenever you've got a personnel matter- and I've been on the other side enough to know in my years here- we [UNO] have a lot of respect for personal matters," Cartier said.

"If there were some awful rumor out there right now as to why I'm on leave," he said, "I can understand why people would be concerned, but people just really have no real explanation [for it]," Cartier said.

"There's no smoking gun, no impropriety at issue here, it's more a question of a person who's been here for a long time and how does he fit into the changes now taking place," Cartier said.

Cartier arrived at UNO in 1985.

In 1996, he won the Distinguished Service Award from the Council for

"I'm not being forced or pushed or steered or anything like that," he said.

Cartier said that what happens at the close of the 90 days "is an open question."

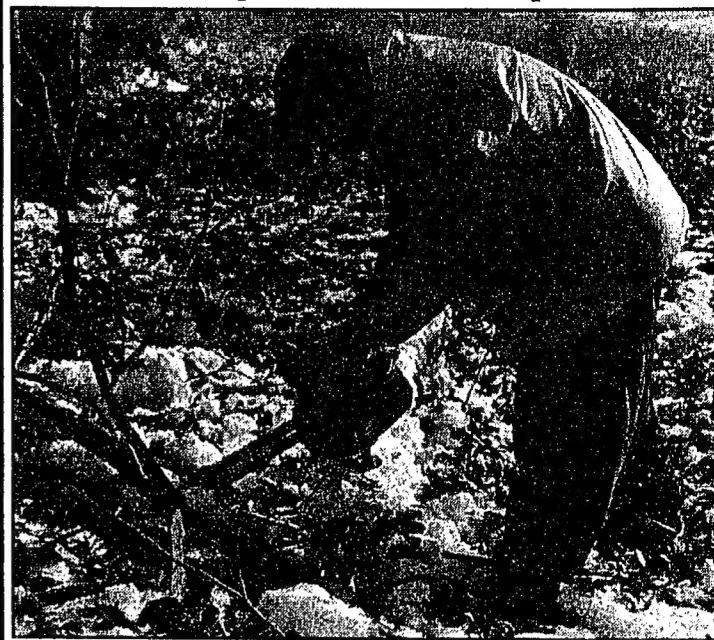

Castilow backed up that position.

"We don't know what is going to happen after that, and it's inappropriate to speculate," she said.

"It is germane to note," she stressed, "that Lou [Cartier] still holds the title of Director of Public Relations. I'm just serving as Interim Director while he's on leave."

Nevertheless, for the time being, Cartier has stripped his office of all personal effects, easily evident upon inspection of the public relations office.

include students enrolled in academic programs.

"In terms of Friday's decision, it's a little complicated because the candidates were given the rules for the election, and the rules are similar to those that have been used in past years," DiSilvestro said.

He referred to a similar event during the elections of 1978. According to DiSilvestro, who worked as a staff writer for the Gateway at the time, ILUNO students were declared eligible to vote by the UNO Election Commission after several ILUNO students voiced complaints.

"We tried to find the records, but couldn't," he said.

Schultz backed up that same discovery.

"I personally checked the files, but we don't keep a record of who voted every year," Schultz said.

"I found the Election Commission rules from 1976, but found the 1978 records were missing. I don't know if they disappeared or if they weren't even kept that year."

"What I found was that the rules used in 1980 were the same rules used in 1976 and, according to them, only students registered through the Registrar are considered students. If they [the '78 election commission] let them vote, then they did that on their own," he said.

"I checked the records to see if maybe we were making a mistake, but I couldn't find anything in the records or the rules that said they could or couldn't vote. Since that time, however, the Constitution has been updated," Schultz said.

No record of the 1978 complaints or election commission ruling was found in archived copies of the Gateway.

"Still, the bottom line is, what possible logic is there to take a group of students who are at UNO and say they shouldn't be considered students?" DiSilvestro said.

"If there are financial or academic reasons that ILUNO students need to be categorized separately, then we need to know what they are," he said.

"...what possible logic is there to take a group of students who are at UNO and say they shouldn't be considered students?"

Sullivan Named Professor of the Year

by Stephen Croucher

UNO professor of chemistry, Dr. Dan Sullivan was named the 1997 Nebraska Professor of the Year by the Council for Advancement and Support of Education (CASE).

This award is part of the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching U.S. Professor of the Year Program.

On winning the award, Sullivan said, "I'm tickled. I am very pleased, the award says a lot about UNO and the community. The chemistry department here is great, I love working in it." Sullivan added, "This award is not just for me, it's for the entire University and the Omaha community."

Sullivan began teaching at the University of Omaha in 1962. Sullivan, known for his loud pops and flashes of light in the classroom was also named one of the recipients of the University's Excellence in Teaching Awards and an Alumni Outstanding Teaching Award in April.

Other than teaching at UNO, Sullivan shares science demonstrations with school children throughout the state with Chemistry and Physics on Wheels (CAPOW).

Recipients of the award are chosen because of the impact and involvement they have with undergraduate students. A scholarly approach to teaching, service to undergraduate students, service to the community and service to the profession of teaching are other criteria needed to win this prestigious award.

When you look into each other's eyes, you can see forever.

Gateway Opinion

Stock Market Not a Free Ride

opinion by Sean Guilfoyle

Crash. Rebound. No, this isn't the end of another pathetic NBA basketball game. Actually, it's the sound our stock market has been making, according to the "experts."

The Dow Jones industrial average closed on Monday, down 554.26 points, leaving the overall index at 7161.15. This spread fear throughout Wall Street and many investors, as thoughts drifted to a familiar October drop in 1987.

The New York Stock Exchange has taken precautions since that fateful day, by enacting halts in trading when the market drops 350 and 550 points, both of which went into effect on Monday. People scrambled to dump the stocks they had so dearly invested in, hoping to build a sizable nest egg on which they could retire.

On Tuesday, the market bounced back, gaining nearly two-thirds of what it had lost on the previous day, with a positive mark of 337 points. Sighs of relief spread through the nation, as those same investors who saw their investments drop like a rock soon found themselves basking in the comfort of prosperity.

Scared investors? Could "Ma" and "Pa" lose all they had put into their mutual fund or their 401K plan at work? Welcome to the real world. Let's refer to the dictionary for a definition of the word "risk."

According to the Merriam Webster's Collegiate Dictionary (tenth edition, as if the ninth had a different definition), risk means "to expose to hazard or danger" or "to incur the risk or danger of."

The stock market isn't "free money." Guess what? You don't always get back what you put in. There is a certain amount of risk involved that many people don't take into account when dropping their life savings into investments. Up to this point, the returns have been staggering, giving even the most feeble and inexperienced investor a great return.

Now the market has been checked. The day-after-day growth of stocks has come to realize this simple fact of physics: What goes up, must come down. There are no correct forecasts for what will happen, but it has traditionally been cyclical. Fed Chairman Alan Greenspan has been cautious about the unruly market, leading lieve the Fed raise interest that probably will this downward tually cause down.

The stock It was something television pro- the country. The stock "experts" get on the tube and tell everyone how horrid the situation is, and to sell, sell, sell. Who cares if you're like most investors and are in it for the long haul? Even though the market has gone down, investors are still getting a return around eleven percent. This is much better than letting it sit in a checking account, or a certificate of deposit.

This should be a wake-up call to all those investors who believed they could get a 20 to 30 percent risk-free return. Maybe now they will research and shop around before plunking their money into a mutual fund that has been successful up to now.

What will happen with the market? I do not know. The great thing about it, though, is that neither does anyone else. Warren Buffet is a "genius" because he appears to have an uncanny ability to predict how the market is going to react. He doesn't, but he does make educated "guesses". Don't listen to the so called experts who appear to be giving solid, sound advice.

While the billionaires appear to have lost millions on Monday, don't fret. They will make more than we can all possibly imagine. Ted Turner lost 185 million. He will still make his contribution to the United Nations, and will continue to suggest other wealthy individuals part with their excess earnings by giving to charity. Might I suggest a better idea, like Ted parting with "Hanoi Jane" (she's the one that's always asleep at the Atlanta Braves baseball games).

As for "Ma" and "Pa", they should be alright. Don't let one day scare you into pulling out of the market and staying away forever. Do, however, let it be a sign that the market is not a free ride. The roller coaster has been at a high, but it is slowly coming down. Just wait for the next stomach-turning corkscrew. Please stay seated until the ride has come to a complete stop.

What? You're staying in a shelter? Your bedroom's turned into a treehouse? You had to stay the night at Aunt Hilda's and share the shower with eleven of your favorite relatives? Get your butt to school!

Student Government, ILUNO groups need understanding opinion by Jonathan Pelphrey

In the time since some of the students enrolled in the Intensive Language at UNO (ILUNO) program were turned away at the polls during the student elections of Oct. 15-16, there's been a lot of talk, but little understanding. Only one thing has become clear: The phrase "enrolled students" is suddenly a contentious term among certain members of the UNO community.

But it need not be.

Let's consider three statements (one from the student government constitution and one each from both sides of the ILUNO debate).

First, the sentence in the constitution that defines membership in the UNO electorate: "All currently enrolled students of [UNO] are, by the fact of their registration, members of the Electorate. . ."

As it turns out, "enrolled students" is a rather vague term in the case of ILUNO students. Consider that a student enrolled in ILUNO is both a "student" and "enrolled" in a UNO program. It is, in fact, difficult to speak of ILUNO students in any but these terms. If they are not students, what are they? If not enrolled, then what, exactly?

But the constitution also contains the phrase ". . . by the fact of their registration." Based on their actions thusfar, it's clear that the election commission (and student court) have taken this "registration" to mean "registered with the UNO Registrar's office." And ILUNO students are not registered with the UNO Registrar's office.

So here lies the core issue in this whole matter: the interpretation of the phrase "enrolled student".

Look at the two viewpoints and their arguments. First, the argument used by those in favor of granting ILUNO students the vote: ILUNO students should be allowed to vote because they are students enrolled in a UNO program, they pay student fees, and they play a vital role in university life.

All very true. ILUNO students are both enrolled and students. They do pay student fees. And they play a very important role in university life. In fact, I dare say that UNO food service would go belly-up were it not for current ILUNO students and graduates of the ILUNO program who now attend UNO as regular students.

But what do those who did not allow ILUNO students to vote have to say? Their argument goes something like this: ILUNO students should not be allowed to vote because they are not registered students, as defined by the UNO Registrar's office.

Also very true. The Registrar's office does not include ILUNO students on their list of enrolled students because ILUNO students are in a non-credit program. The Registrar is only responsible for students who are receiving college credit through UNO. Thus, the Registrar's office does not handle any ILUNO students' academic records.

So we have two parties defining one term in two different ways. Simply put, the difference is this: the ILUNO contingent (for lack of a better term) says students enrolled in any UNO program should be able to vote (note the addition of the phrase "any UNO program"). The student government contingent says only students enrolled in credit-granting programs should be able to vote. Who is right? In my view, both parties can be right. And both could be terribly wrong.

The student court's decision will stand for now — simply because it is the decision of the student court. But this does not eliminate the problem.

Right now both sides in the debate seem to be readying for a battle of attrition. The ILUNO contingent has taken a very aggressive position and says they will go to court if necessary. Many members of Student Government have likely become a little indignant over this whole ordeal and will probably sit on this issue and do nothing about it. (I'm not saying this in an attempt to cut anyone down.)

I encourage both sides to resist the temptation to "fight it out".

Instead, key people from both sides need to sit down and come to a thorough understanding of the difference between the two viewpoints. A wise person once said that no one should insist on his own point of view until he can explain the other person's point of view to that person's satisfaction.

This kind of approach is sorely needed in this situation.

It should be clear to everyone involved in this affair that the constitution needs revision. Just what that revision should be has yet to be decided. But one can only hope that there is someone in Student Government who can be both fair and decisive in the matter.

In closing, let's remember that ILUNO students do, in fact, play an important part in the life of UNO. They have sacrificed a lot personally and financially for the opportunity to come and study English here (with the hope that they will qualify for admission as regular students). At a time when UNO is faced with student retention problems, it is important to note that more than 70 percent of ILUNO students stay at UNO to finish their degrees. What's more, the number of ILUNO students at UNO has increased 55.4 percent since 1994 to 701 students.

Perhaps it is time to think very carefully about why, exactly, we exclude them from our elections.

Musician Marches, Plays to a Different Tune

by Reneé Ryan

Many people know about bluegrass music and many have heard classical music. But chances are they never link the two.

But on Nov. 6 at the Strauss Performing Art Center, pianist and composer Bob Dawson will do just that.

Dawson is the creator of "bluegrass piano" and a concert which has been referred to as "Breaking the Rules." The concert uses discussion, story and music to explore the links between bluegrass music and the works of Mozart and Chopin. He uses original works — new arrangements of Broadway, television and movie music — to tie rhythms together.

On top of the Nov. 6 concert, Dawson will be a guest at the Music Masters Class Monday Nov. 3, at UNO. "I have turned that class time over to him," said Dr. James Johnson, director of Keyboard Activities at UNO. "He might speak or play." Johnson said Dawson's music has been called eclectic, some jazz with some classical.

Another program Dawson will give in Omaha is called "Sound Images for Kids". The 45 minute show teaches students to see the world in a more dynamic light. He talks in terms of rhythm and its existence in many aspects of everyday life. "It is important for children to understand what they are seeking when they listen to music," Dawson said. He said we all listen for rhythm and it is therefore possible to tie rap to Mozart, and interest kids in something cultural.

His interest in music began during childhood, but he wasn't serious until high school. He has two brothers who also play the piano, and at age 23 he was appointed staff accompanist at the Julliard School of Music. He obtained his bachelors degree in music at the New England Conservatory.

Such celebrities as Mikhail Gorbachev, Hillary Clinton and Danielle Steele have requested Dawson to play for them. He has been the on-camera pianist in daytime dramas "All My Children," "Guiding Light," and "As The World Turns." Among many other honors, he was the rehearsal pianist for the keyboard scene in the movie "Big," with Tom Hanks.

Delta Sigma Pi was involved in bringing Dawson to UNO. President Charla Marcelino has been in contact with Dawson's agent, and Dawson said he is coming to UNO because his CD is hitting some stations, and the interest is there. His tour includes Omaha and Lincoln.

Dawson said music is magical to him, it reaches deep down inside the soul. He believes everyone loves music, and encourages people to attend the concert saying, "What a person doesn't find in one piece, hopefully they will find in another."

Forensics Team Swings Tournament

by Kathy Daley

Hard work and endurance paid off last weekend when the UNO Forensics team traveled to Mankato, Minn. for the Minnesota Forensics Swing Tournament.

"We have a good team this year," said Melissa Jahn, Forensics Director. "They really pulled together this weekend when they met up with students at the tournament." The tournament included students from schools in Texas, South Dakota, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Nebraska and Iowa.

UNO's team entered 16 events in the two part tournament, with students Stephen Croucher, Dave Jackson, Christine Mixan, Ryan Price and Hyrum Wilson.

The first half of the tournament was held in Mankato. UNO finished 6th out of the 23 schools. Croucher was a semi finalist. Jackson finished 4th in prose and 4th in poetry and 3rd in Duo. Mixan also finished 3rd in Duo. Wilson finished 4th in After Dinner Speaking.

Croucher has shown improvement this year. Jahn said, "He is expanding his forensic qualities as well as broadening his speaking capabilities." His achievements last weekend were well deserved but not surprising.

The second half of the tournament was held at Bethany Lutheran, proving to be just as successful as the first half. UNO again finished 6th, this time out of 16 teams. Croucher finished 4th in persuasive speaking and 2nd in exempt speaking. Jackson finished 4th in prose and 4th in poetry.

"He (Jackson) has always had natural capabilities as a performer," Jahn said.

Due to the small size of the team, UNO did better than expected. Jahn as well as many of the forensic students, believe that the team would grow if more people actually knew that UNO did indeed have a forensic team.

The next tournament will be held at Wayne State in Nebraska. Jahn says she is looking forward to the event. "It will be interesting to find out what other Nebraska schools are up to," she said.

Mav Notes

by Andy Nordmeier

Dropping Out

The Mav football team fell out of the polls for the first time all season following their 37-17 loss to Northern Colorado. The win put Northern Colorado back in the polls at No. 19. The other North Central Conference teams in the polls is North Dakota at No. 7.

Bumps, Bltes, and Bruises

Quarterback Ed Thompson had suffered a shin injury against Northern Colorado last week that caused him to miss some time. He will play this week. The news is a little worse for wide receiver Tim Sullivan. He is questionable for the game against MSU with a separated shoulder. Defensive back Nathan Tate is still questionable with an ankle injury. Linebacker Jason Bartling is sidelined with a knee injury. Linebacker Marcelles Walker and wide receiver MarTay Jenkins are out for the season.

Playoff Picture

The Mavs currently stand at No. 6 in the regional rankings. Northwest Missouri State, North Dakota, Pittsburg State, Truman State, and Northern Colorado all are ahead of the Mavs. The top four teams make the playoffs and there is a chance the Mavs still could make it. North Dakota and Northern Colorado play at the end of the season. Truman State still must play both Pittsburg State and Northwest Missouri. These games will cause some shuffling in the polls and may let the Mavs back in to the playoff picture.

Who's the Impostor?

The betting type would feel confident to put their money on the Mavs this week because they know it will be a win. That's because both teams are nicknamed the Mavs. UNO will be in red and white and MSU in white with purple and yellow trim.

The Series

The Mankato State University (MSU) Mavs hold a 10-5 edge in the all time series over the UNO Mavs. MSU has won the last eight games in the series including a 16-15 win last year in Omaha. That game would prove to be the only loss during the regular season for UNO. The last UNO win was a 13-0 shutout in 1988.

Keys to Victory

For UNO to win tomorrow they must do the following. First, they need to win the possession battle. Second, they need to avoid being bitten by the turnover bug and not give MSU any gifts. Third, UNO must play fundamental football and stop MSU on third down situations.

A Word About Mankato State

MSU is coming off of a 5-6 season and is 4-4 overall, 3-3 in the NCC so far. They won 26-14 last week over lowly Morningside to end a three-game skid. MSU averages 298 yards of offense a game. Their offense is similar to UNO's as both are led by rushing attacks. MSU features running back Steve Rosin and his 113 carries for 389 yards and eight scores. Quarterback Zach Witt has rushed for 357 yards on 128 carries and has a touchdown this year. He has also passed for 1,135 yards and five touchdowns.

Swimmers Ready for First Meet

by Amy Silver

The UNO Swimming and Diving team takes to the water for their first meet Friday against the University of South Dakota. On Saturday, they will take on South Dakota State University. The team, which has been practicing since early September, is ready, according to head coach Todd Samland.

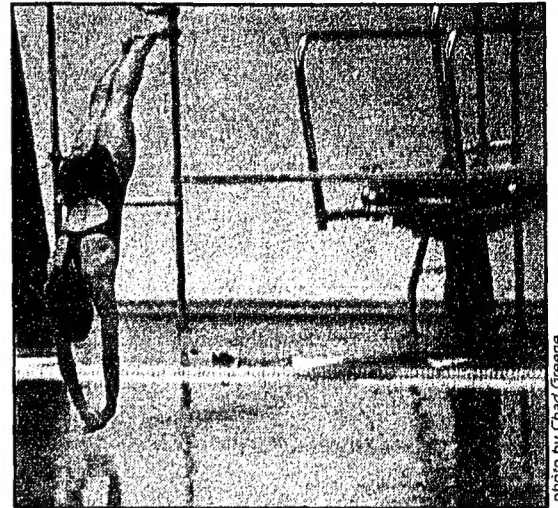

"We're anxious. We want to see what our girls can do in a meet situation," he said.

The swimmers and divers will compete for the first time on Friday, and although the University of South Dakota has both a swimming and diving team, South Dakota State will only compete with the swimming team.

The divers will take the opportunity at South Dakota State to experiment with different dives. While the swimmers have many different events, the divers are constantly focused on one event, Samland said.

"I am anxious to see what the divers do on Friday. The University of South Dakota will serve as a barometer to see where we are in relation the other teams," Samland said.

Samland is expecting strong performances from Senior Kate Conklin, Sophomore Kristi Malone, and Freshman Steph Patterson. He is most impressed with the improvement of

Diver Michelle Williams breaks the surface in preparation for today's meet against University of South Dakota

Freshman Kim Smith. Kim has really brought down her all over times, and that is what this sport is about, lowering your individual time, Samland said.

Everyone has strengths and weaknesses, and everyone will contribute to this first meet. We have expectations, but we really need to see how we stack up to the competition before we really establish goals, Samland said.

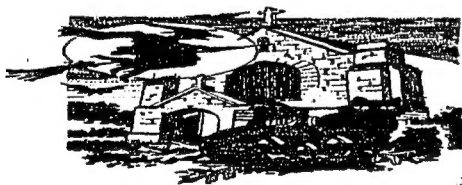

"We've been practicing hard, and it's time to see what we can do in a meet situation, Friday, we will do that."

ball, MSU yields 358 yards per game. Chris Tatro and Cory Czepa lead the defensive charge for MSU. Tatro is the leading tackler with 69 stops on the year. Czepa has 43 tackles, six of them going for sacks.

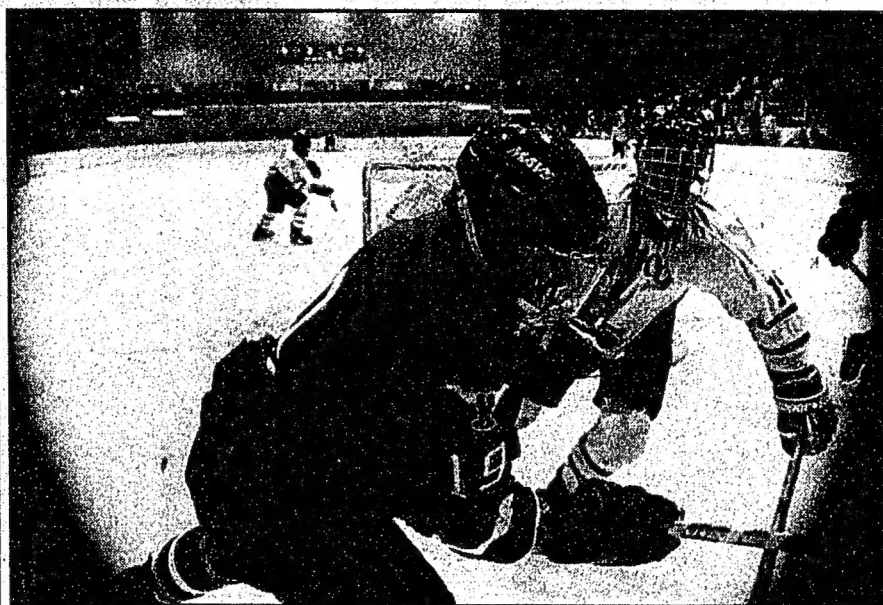

Who to Watch

For UNO, keep an eye on Tony Kreis. He may be asked to go both ways again this week due to injuries in the receiver core. For MSU look at Tywan Mitchell. Mitchell is the team's leading receiver with 514 yards and two touchdowns on 41 catches. He accounts for almost half of MSU's aerial offense.

Around the NCC

The seventh week of the nine-week NCC season features a pair of key matchups. NCC co-leader North Dakota locks horns with South Dakota at Vermillion, S.D. The other co-leader, Northern Colorado, may be surprised by winless Morningside, the next opponent for UNO, when the teams meet in Sioux City, Iowa. South Dakota State takes the quick bus ride to Sioux Falls, S.D. to battle Augustana. St. Cloud State gets to try their fate in the Fargodome against North Dakota State.

Hockey action hits the Civic

The UNO Men's hockey team will face Princeton University tonight and tomorrow evening at 7:05 p.m. at the Civic Auditorium. A limited number of tickets are still available for the game — call 554-MAVS for more information.

Hockey stats and info available

USWest Dex Q&A is providing Mav hockey fans with a special service, offering stats and highlights when calling 573-3600. At the prompt, dial "PUCK" (7825) and a complete commentary by Terry Leahy will be available 24-hours a day.

On Princeton...

The Tigers posted a 18-12-4 season record last year and were tied for fifth in the ECAC. With 19 returning players, including their top two scorers, the Tigers' head coach is Don Calhoun, who is in his seventh season with Princeton.

Sanchez Wins

He also said that the image of Student President/Regent can be improved. "I want to put out surveys and comment cards to ask students what they think about Student Government, and how I'm doing my job as Student President/Regent. Then I'd like Student Government to post the results in the Gateway."

Sanchez credited his campaign organization and workers for his victory in the election. "I had the best campaign, hands down. They were the hardest working campaigners I could ever ask for."

Sanchez said he would try to allow others in student government to do their jobs as usual. "I will definitely be a macro manager."

Micro managing really doesn't work. You need to allow people to do their job without breathing down their shoulders every second."

Sanchez said he hoped to fill out-going Student President/Regent Jason Winterboer's shoes well. "Jason's done a great job. However, I do think I will be more accessible to the UNO students."

According to Sanchez, it will be important for him to reach out to the common student. "To reach the common UNO student, I will be out on campus talking to as many students as I can, trying to reach each and every one."
